Short Synopsis of the Story
OF
"The Yeomen of the Guard."

ACT I.

THE story opens at Tower Green, where Col. Fairfax, a gallant soldier, is to be beheaded, on a charge falsely preferred against him by his cousin, a Secretary of State, who would inherit the family estates if the Colonel died a bachelor. Phoebe, the pretty daughter of Sergeant Meryll, falls in love with the Colonel—quite secretly of course—and Wilfred Shadbolt, who is anything but handsome, and who loves Phoebe in vain, is filled with jealousy. With a desire to thwart the designs of his cousin, Col. Fairfax is anxious to marry, if only for an hour before he dies, and to that end Sir Richard Cholmondeley, an old friend of the Colonel, provides him with a wife in Elsie Maynard, a strolling singer, who, with Jack Point, her companion, arrives opportunely at the Tower. Elsie only agrees to the marriage conditionally on her becoming a widow in an hour, and at the same time Jack Point accepts the post of Jester in the household of the Lieutenant. Complications ensue by the unexpected arrival home of Leonard Meryll, Phoebe's brother, who, as a reward of valour, has been promoted to the Yeomen of the Guard. This presents a fine opening to Sergeant Meryll, who, disguising Fairfax as his son, introduces him to his brother Yeomen of the Guard, and they, never suspecting his real identity, greet him right heartily. Then the solemn sounding of the death knell announcing the hour of execution, and the crowd assemble on Tower Green. The Yeomen of the Guard take up their position, so does the Headsman—but the prisoner cannot be found, and there is great confusion in the search for him, and Wilfred Shadbolt is protestingly arrested. Elsie, overcome by the knowledge that she is still a wife, when she expected to be a widow, collapses in the arms of one of the Yeomen—none other, of course, than her own disguised husband.

ACT II.

THE second act, which is set in the same scene, opens two days later, when the prisoner is still uncaptured, and Dame Carruthers does not hesitate to taunt the Yeomen with the knowledge. Jack Point and Wilfred are both correspondingly depressed, though through different causes, the former having lost his bride that was to be, and the latter finds that his occupation is gone. Wilfred believes he would make an excellent jester, so he and Point come to terms. They concoct their "idea" of a big joke, which is, that Wilfred shall discharge a gun from the wharf, and then take oath that in so doing he shot Fairfax as he was swimming to safety, and that the Colonel's body sank in the river. This will enable Jack Point to marry Elsie, thus widowed, and in return Wilfred is to be taught by him how to become a jester. Their calculations are rudely upset when the real son of Sergeant Meryll arrives with a reprieve for Col. Fairfax, and this gives Dame Carruthers, who has long displayed an ardent but unrequited love of Sergeant Meryll, a chance to demand her price of silence—his hand. Thus both Sergeant Meryll and his daughter are compelled to marry where their hearts are not, but Elsie is happy in the fact that she loves her husband to whom she has already been so strangely wed. And the fate of Jack Point. Ah! his is the pathetic portion. His gaiety is assumed as he tries to sing his song that a few brief hours before charmed them all, but the effort is too much for the noble jester, and the curtain falls with the refrain of his song in the ears and Jack Point insensible at the feet of Elsie Maynard.

W. S. Gilbert—His Life and Letters.

"The Yeomen of the Guard" was produced at the Savoy on the 3rd October, 1888, and in the opinion of many there can be no question that with this Opera the achievement of the collaborators reached its highest point.

"I thought," said Gilbert, "'The Yeomen' was the best thing we had done"—and he was right: the best thing they had done or were ever to do, a perfect work of art.

Gilbert was once asked what gave him the idea of "The Yeomen," and he said that, while waiting for a train on a railway platform one day, he noticed a poster of a befeater advertising the Tower Furnishing Company, and this set him thinking and devising, and the result was The Merryman and His Maid.

The evolution of the idea is indicated in two letters written to Sullivan:—

Dear S.,

I have got the plot of the new piece pretty well combed out, and I'm glad to hear you can dine with us on Wednesday, as we can go carefully into the matter after dinner. It is quite a consistent and effective story, without anachronisms or pathos of any kind, and I hope you will like it.

Yours very truly, W. S. Gilbert.

Dear Sullivan,

September 13, 1888.

The more I think of it, the more convinced I am that "The Beefeaters" is the name for the new piece. It is a good, sturdy, solid name, conjuring up picturesque associations and clearly telling its own tale at once. "The Tower" is nothing. No one knows but a few that beefeaters were called Tower Wardens. I put the two names before Hare without comment and asked him which he preferred, and he said "'The Beefeaters' by all means." This is for what it is worth.

Very truly yours, W. S. Gilbert.

There can be no sort of doubt that The Yeomen of the Guard is a far better title still.

W. S. Gilbert—His Life and Letters

Talking to Mr. William Archer of The Yeomen of the Guard Gilbert gave some interesting details of the method of his collaboration with Sir Arthur Sullivan :

The verse always preceded the music, or even any hint of it. Sometimes—very rarely—Sullivan would say of some song I had given him "My dear-fellow, I can't make anything of this"—and then I would re-write it entirely, never tinker at it. But, of course, I don't mean to say that I "invented" all the rhythms and stanzas in the operas. Often a rhythm would be suggested by some old tune or other running in my head, and I would fit my words to it more or less exactly. When Sullivan knew I had done so, he would say, "Don't tell me what the tune is, or I shan't be able to get it out of my head." But once, I remember, I did tell him. There is a duet in "The Yeomen of the Guard" beginning:

"I have a song to sing, O!
Sing me your song, O!"

It was suggested to me by an old chanter I used to hear the sailors on board my yacht singing in the "dog-watch" on Saturday evenings, beginning:

"Come, and I will sing to you—
What will you sing to me?
I will sing you one, O!
What is your one, O!"

And so on. Well, when I gave Sullivan the words of the duet, he found the utmost difficulty in setting it. He tried hard for a fortnight, but in vain. I offered to re-cast it in another mould, but he expressed himself so delighted with it in its then form that he was determined to work it out to a satisfactory issue. At last, he came to me and said: "You often have some old air in your mind which prompts the metre of your songs; if anything prompted you in this one, hum it to me—it may help me." Only a rash man ever asks me to hum, but the situation was desperate, and I did my best to convey to him the air of the chanter that had suggested the song to me. I was so far successful that before I had hummed a dozen bars he exclaimed "That will do—I've got it!" And in an hour he produced the charming air as it appears in the opera.

Amateur Operatic Society.

THE Society's production of "The Yeomen of the Guard" is in response to the vote taken during the performances of "The Mikado" in December, 1926, when from the selection of 28 Operas suggested for performance votes were recorded as follows:—

The Yeomen of the Guard	- 177
Iolanthe	- 124
Maid of the Mountains	- 112
The Geisha	- 95
Trial by Jury	- 95
Pirates of Penzance	- 95

The number of voting papers returned was far in excess of expectations and the Committee view with pleasure the general interest taken in the Society's work as shown by the increased number of Subscribers, many of whom reside in outlying districts.

From the list recorded above it will be seen that apart from Gilbert and Sullivan Operas, "The Maid of the Mountains" would be likely to prove a popular subject for the Society's next production. The rights of this musical comedy, however, have not been released for amateurs and the next on the list "The Geisha" is under consideration for production during the week commencing 17th December next.

Ladies and Gentlemen desiring to join the Society as Acting Members are invited to communicate with the Hon. Secretary, "Heighton," Danes Hill, Woking, from whom full particulars as to membership may be obtained.

Efficient Service

YEARs of unique experience have enabled Boots The Chemists to organise and perfect an efficient shopping service. Every branch is planned and equipped on modern lines. Scrupulous care is given to every detail to ensure the comfort and convenience of customers. The number of departments and the variety of goods displayed save you time and trouble when shopping. In every department you will find a constant standard of good quality, moderate prices and courteous service.

Appreciation of this service is adequately shown by the fact that in one year over one hundred million customers are served in Boots branches.

I have a song to sing O!

The Yeomen of the Guard.

Elsie: I have a song to sing, O!
Point: Sing me your song, O!
Elsie: It is sung to the air
Of a bathroom fair
And it tells of a silky Sorbo!
It's a song of a sponge that is smooth and soft!
And fit for the cherubims'
baths up aloft.
It improves with the soap and it lasts very long
And it doesn't wear out for it's made very strong!
And it's brought the bloom
that inspires my song—
It's fine for the skin of my

ORDER YOUR MILK SUPPLY from J. TRIGG & SON, Dairy Farmers.
Our Milk is Safe Milk Pasteurized and bottled at our MODEL DAIRY under licence by the Ministry of Health.
The following opinions regarding Pasteurization are worthy of your consideration.
Dr. NATHAN RAW, C.M.C., M.D., F.R.C.S., M.R.C.P., representing National Association of Prevention of Tuberculosis.
At the National Milk Conference, 1926.
"I certainly hope that in the near future the Government will be induced to bring in a bill for the compulsory pasteurization of all milk offered for sale to the public in this country."
Dr. S. G. MOORE, M.D., M.P., D.P.H., Medical Officer of Health, Huddersfield.
"Looked at in the cold light of reason, even Certified Milk is not absolutely safe, but I do know that pasteuriza- tion properly conducted under proper supervision in proper plant, does absolutely render the milk safe."
The late Sir MALCOLM MORRIS, K.C.V.O.
"I believe that milk that has been pasteurized is in a position to remove to a very large extent the possibility of Surgical Tuberculosis in the young."
Insist on being supplied with properly pasteurized milk
